

Discovering your God-Given Calling

Take some time to consider and answer the following questions:

1. What types of situations make your heart race? (I mean this in a good way - when you encounter this type of situation, it makes you want to jump into action and get involved).
2. What do you feel are your natural strengths and abilities?
3. What do other people say you're good at? How do they compliment you?
4. What are your spiritual gifts? If you need help with this answer, consider taking a free online test at www.spiritualgiftstest.com
5. Where do you feel you add value to those around you?
6. What types of things are you passionate about?
7. What types of things do you dislike altogether?

Discovering your God-Given Calling

Life experiences often give you insight and empathy toward others. God can use your experiences to comfort and minister to others. When considering the life events that you charted on page 2, answer the following:

1. How have these events shaped you as a person - spiritually, emotionally, and mentally?
2. How has God proven His character as He walked alongside you through the events?
3. What blessings have come as a result of the events (even the unpleasant)?
4. How might specific people groups benefit from the wisdom you gleaned through the events?
5. As you completed and prayed over all three pages of this worksheet, where did you discover common threads or areas where your preferences, gifts, talents, and life experiences come together? Does this provide insight and help you discover your God-given calling?
6. How might you be called to make a difference in the lives of the people around you - at work, at church, in your family, in recreational situations, or elsewhere?
